Bay Windows

---

The Energy Shield bay window is always custom made and is a decorative window that projects outward from the exterior wall. This style of window is commonly referred to as a Bench Seat window and they come out farther than other window types, slightly increasing the amount of floor space in the room. The most common configuration is a fixed is a 3-window pattern with a fixed picture window in the center flanked by two single-hung or double-hung windows for ventilation.

You're not limited to using these windows for living room or dining spaces. Have them placed in your kitchen or bathroom to create a garden window. They're great for showcasing your favorite herbs or other plants.

Bow Windows

Bow windows form a gentle curve from your home. You can combine four or more windows to form your "bow". They don't extend as far from your home as bay windows do and lack space for a seat or shelf. People usually have these built with all picture windows. We'll be glad to explore other options if you have a different design in mind.

Benefits of Both Window Types

Both windows make interior rooms feel bigger and increase the amount of light let into your home. Each window immediately becomes the focal point of a room and add immediate value to your home.
